PERSONAL LOG
TOGUSA: PSB-S9 > 11.22.2029 07:32:51

They call me the "Rookie," the newest member of Public Security Bureau - Section 9. I was a detective for three years before they singled me out, putting me through vigorous training courses and a tough aptitude test.

Section 9 doesn't appear on any official government records; it's a covert assault organization designed to eliminate crime and its causes.

With the emergence and advancement of electronic technologies, criminals have become high-tech experts. Most of Section 9's interests are centered on hackers and terrorists, correcting crime centered on the Net. Hackers invade industries and government facilities through the Net, manipulating information, causing system black-outs and using different viruses to control the stock market and E-fund transfers. Terrorists, on the other hand, use their Net connections to sabotage, hijack, ghost hack and more. With so many wired cyborg individuals, even assassination via the Net is possible. As technology advances, crimes become more diverse and complex.

Section 9 was always busy. That's another reason they wanted me. My brain is wired...but not like the ones on the market. The newly designed Unified Sense and Fuchikoma Device has been loaded into my system. I'm a test case. I guess I possess the accelerated aptitude power needed for artificial perception more than anybody else in Section 9. The Development Planner told me I could be the strongest Fuchikoma-driver ever, if the connection with my Fuchikoma is stable. Of course everyone in S9 realizes my potential and is waiting to see if this new toy really works. It's been three months since I joined the Unit. So far, I've only been able to perform little chores and menial jobs. Nothing has happened to prove myself to them, to test my ability... yet.

The Cyborg Body developer, Mega-Tech Body Corps' building in Newport City was just blown up. The bomb consisted mainly of B-compo explosives and nearly leveled the building. 88 people were killed and many more were wounded in the blast. Victims were mainly engineers and employees of Mega-Tech, plus a few passers by. The remaining rubble was hardly recognizable. Surprisingly, a few minutes after the investigation began, the terrorists themselves ran a crime statement into the Net, claiming responsibility. They call themselves the "Human Liberation Line" - some new kind of sect with a special grudge against cyborgs, it seems.

Ten minutes later, we were launching our Fuchikomas. My first battle isn't starting the way I had expected. The enemy's identity and purposes are unknown... and so are our odds...

LOCK-ON MISSILE ATTACK

By holding down the ■ Button, your Balkan weapon will fire for a short time, then will switch to Lock-On Mode. The longer you hold the ■ Button, the more missiles you can lock-on, up to a maximum of 6. When you release the ■ Button while Locked-On, the tracking missiles will launch.

If you hold the ■ Button too long, you will lose the Lock-On Mode. If an enemy damages your Fuchikoma while in Lock-On mode, you will lose the Lock-On and have to recharge it again. Everything within your valid range will be targeted, with the target closest to your Fuchikoma taking the most damage.

GRENAD LAUNCHER

Press the ● button to launch a grenade straight ahead of the Fuchikoma. The explosive grenade will cause extensive damage to all enemies in the area. Fuchikomas are equipped to carry a maximum of 3 grenades.

SURFACE CLIMBING CAPABILITY

When an obstacle is in the way, your Fuchikoma can cling to the obstacle and maneuver over it, climbing on walls and ceilings. Press the ✕ button and your Fuchikoma will jump off of the obstacle, dropping to the ground. This capability is useful for avoiding certain attacks and for reaching items or enemies in different areas. Keep in mind that there are certain surfaces your Fuchikoma cannot climb.

USE THE RADAR

Each mission objective is to destroy certain designated targets. If you're not sure which way to go, check the radar - it displays the position of all enemies and targets, in relation to the Fuchikoma, for each mission.

USE SLIDE & DASH EFFECTIVELY

Practice the Dash and Slide techniques. These are much faster than the Fuchikoma's normal walk, and will save you time. Slide to dodge enemy attacks and move quickly without changing viewpoints. By using the Dash with the jump, you can jump further and move quicker.

CLIMBING ATTACK

On the ground, your missiles cannot Lock-On certain enemies in the air. Use your Fuchikoma's climbing abilities to scale buildings or other objects and destroy these enemies.

AXIS TURN

When you fight certain powerful enemies, you won't be able to turn backwards. You will have to move parallel to your enemy, attacking while rotating.

Keep your target in your sights and watch carefully for dangerous attacks.

GRENADE

Pick these items up to re-stock your grenades. Your Fuchikoma is designed to carry 3 grenades. Once you have the maximum number of grenades, you cannot retrieve any more.

> TRAINING MODE

There are 6 different areas in the Training Mode, each with a time limit and a certain number of targets to destroy. If you destroy the specified targets within the time limit, you can proceed to the next area. Your time will be extended as you enter each new area.

If your shield gauge or time limit reaches zero, or if you clear all targets, the training is over. Your score and class (rank) will be displayed, followed by an animated evaluation of your performance. If your score is sufficiently high, you will be able to enter your initials in the ranking.
